Dear colleagues,

The Organizing Committee of the XII Brazilian Symposium on Vertebrate Paleontology (SBPV) is pleased to announce that the event will be held from May 15th to 19th, 2023. After deliberations and following suggestions from the Brazilian vertebrate paleontology community, we inform that the main scientific sessions of the SBPV will take place in the city of Santa Maria. In this way, the symposium can count on the infrastructure of the Federal University of Santa Maria, as well as on a wide network of hotels and services in the municipality.

Despite this change, the symposium will still hold activities in the Quarta Colônia region. Field trips, technical visits and other exciting activities are being planned to provide participants an immersion in the world's cradle of dinosaurs.

Aiming to stimulate the scientific debate at the symposium, we encourage the submission of proposals for workshops, round tables, exhibitions, or other activities. If you have a proposal, please let us know through the email contato@sbpv.rocks.

We will soon publish information on the schedule, including registration and submission! Stay tuned for the news on our webpage (www.sbpv.rocks).
